The Big Show

Rehearsals for the Musical Comedy "Ticklish Business", under the personal direction of Chic Perkins-King, are going fine and everyone is working hard to make this production a big success.

Some unusual talent has been discovered and Mrs. King promises all who attend, a real surprise.

The production, which is under the auspices of the Mokena PTA will be presented at the Mokena public school Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, February 23, 24 and 25.

The cast, which consists of 50, all home folks, are working hard to put on a real "professional" show and if the opening rehearsals are any indication, you may rest assured that this show will be the "Tops."

The gymnasium is being fixed so that the annoying echo which has always been present at past performances, will be lessened or eliminated entirely, which will enable everyone to hear perfectly.

Those desiring tickets for this worthy cause, may obtain them from Mr. Arthur Schoop, president of the Mokena PTA, who also is in charge of ticket committees.

Orland PTA Show Plays To Packed Houses

The show sponsored by the Orland P.T.A. last Thursday and Friday was a howling success. It was packed with laughs from start to finish. This show had a cast of 50 local men and women and was even greater than the "Womanless Wedding," which played here several years ago and that's saying a plenty.

The big show brought back the days of long ago with the appearance of the girls of the gay 90's. George and Martha Washington, the Senator and his wife, the old time church deacon and his wife, and the President of the Woman's club, and we must not forget the beauty contest. It was a wow. The show started last Thursday night and after the first performance the news of how good it was spread rapidly and by Friday night which was the last night of the show, the Orland school auditorium was packed beyond capacity.

The play was one of the most fascinating and interesting yet attempted in Orland territory. The proceeds were extra good and will help out the treasurer of the Orland PTA who sincerely appreciate the fine support given their undertaking by the public.

New Lenox Singing Mouse Makes His First Radio Debut

The singing mouse of New Lenox owned by Roscoe Ridgway of that village, went on the air last Saturday when he made his radio debut. We say "he" because Mr. Ridgway says the singer is a Mister mouse.

The interview with Mr. Ridgway by the announcer of radio station WCLS of Joliet and the song of the mouse was broadcast from the lobby of the Louis Joliet Hotel on the 7 UP program. The little singer was plainly heard over the radio and sounded like a bird.

During the interview Mr. Ridgway said the mouse looked just like any other mouse with the exception that it has large ears. He has named the mouse "Lightning" because it so speedy. He has had several offers for the mouse, but has not accepted any. He has the mouse in a cage.

New Lenox School Band Sponsors Two Amateur Nights

The New Lenox Grade School Band is sponsoring two Amateur Nights in the school gym on Thursday and Friday February 10 and 11 at 8 p. m.

Three cash awards are to be offered each night to the acts winning most favor with the audience.

So many contestants are taking part that the whole village of New Lenox, plus the Grade School Band, anticipate the largest crowd that has ever been seen at an affair here. This is due to the fact that not only home folks, but also out of town folks are entering the contest, from fifty miles away.

The farmers have enough time on their hands now and are ready for entertainment. Prices are reasonable advance ticket selling is some cheaper than if bought at the door.

Remember the kiddies should not be put to bed early on those two nights of February 10th and 11th. Grandma and Grandpa should not be left alone. Just pile the entire family into the old fliver and come to the school gym at New Lenox on Thursday and Friday nights to see the Amateur night contest when those big cash prizes will be given away.

Come and vote for your favorite. Come and do your stunt. Maybe you will get one of those big prizes to take home with you. They are cash and won't be hard to carry.

The stage will be a mass of gleaming sparkle and laughter and the school band has gone to the trouble of bringing Miss Wilda A. Weaver here to help perfect the performance.

Miss Weaver has long been known in this section of Illinois, for three years she was connected with WLS of Chicago and known as an Entertainer on Lyceum tours.

Let's all be on hand in the New Lenox school auditorium this Thursday and Friday at 8 o'clock when the Grade School Band presents the Amateur Night of America. The proceeds of the contest go for uniforms for the Band members.

Contestants are taking part from New Lenox, Joliet, Lockport, Orland Park, Tinley Park, Mokena, Glenwood, Frankfort, Peotone, Manhattan, Marley and Plainfield.

ADRIAN GIVES YOU FASHIONS FOR 1938

FOTO-FEATURE

The creator of many styles that later become accepted world modes, Adrian, most famous cinema stylist, presents his 1938 fashion predictions in "Mannequin," new picture starring Joan Crawford. Among the gowns worn by Miss Crawford are those for which Photographer Hurrell posed the illustrations shown on this page. American women will do well to examine them closely, for 1938 will likely find many of these frills and fancies displayed in prominent shop windows. Adrian, shown at the right with his drawing board, does not go for extremes, yet insists on originality in his styles. No better evidence of this trait can be found than the attractive Cossack-type hat Miss Crawford dons at the left, made from magenta, green and purple yarn. A narrow scarf of matching color scheme shows from under her blue fox coat, at the neckline.

Interesting bodice treatment and full skirt falling into graceful folds combine to fashion this silver brocade gown which Joan wears in a style show sequence of "Mannequin." It is one of the few non-street attires presented in Adrian's 1938 fashion parade for the American woman.

You'd never suspect from the front that the entire back of this jacket is made of new blue-tone tuxedo fox.

Periwinkle blue crepe with narrow beaded trim offers an interesting treatment to this new hat. The gown is also of periwinkle blue.

Black velvet, gold metal cloth blouse combine to fashion this attractive dress, modeled in typical mannequin style by shapely Miss Crawford. Elsewhere on this page is another photo of the same outfit.

This three-piece pajama ensemble is of cadet blue woolen gabardine. The blouse features white buttons and wide shoulders.

As dramatic as the actress herself is this attractive dress created of black velvet with lavish fox fur trimming. This is the same outfit shown elsewhere on the page, the finger-tip coat covering a metal cloth blouse.

The street dress is of black crepe, sheared at the waistline. A three-quarter length blue fox cape features a wide shoulderline, and the snug hat fits nicely into this picture.

Few new styles from "Mannequin" will attract more attention than this. It's of black velvet, hand embroidered with white yarn, gold thread and gold beads. The purse is selected to match, and the wide-brimmed hat fits the combination perfectly. Thus attired, Joan is all ready for a busy afternoon with the bridge club. She's bound to attract kibitzers!

CRAWFORD the GLAMOROUS

Joan Crawford is an example of what can happen to the girl with talent, ambition, enthusiasm and the confidence to keep on trying in the face of discouragement. She was born in San Antonio, Texas, in 1907, the daughter of a theater manager. At fourteen she was a switchboard operator in Lawton, Okla. Next came a convent at Kansas City, followed by a department store job by day and dancing lessons by night. On her first stage job Joan was stranded 300 miles from home, but that experience gave her courage. An M-G-M talent scout saw her in the Shubert show, "Innocent Eyes." That started it!

TIPS to Gardeners

Get Flowers Earlier

GARDENERS can get earlier bloom from many flowers by starting them indoors from seed and setting the plants in the open soil when frost danger is past.

Plant seeds of the following indoors about six weeks before the plants are to be set out: Delphinium, pink, gaillardia, lobelia, myosotis, pansy, Iceland poppy, salvia, stock and verbenas.

A week or two later the following can be sown indoors: Ageratum, snapdragon, aster, dahlia, nicotiana, petunia, phlox drummondii, salpiglossis, scabiosa and vinca rosea.

Seed may be procured at your corner store sufficiently early to permit indoor planting.

With a number of popular flowers, however, there is no advantage to be gained by early starting indoors, according to Gilbert Bentley, flower expert of the Ferry Seed Institute.

In this class are sweet alyssum, calendula, calliopsis, candytuft, four o'clock, marigold and nasturtium.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of servus anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Moral Force Lacking

"The question of human welfare is not an economic question. It is a moral question. There is no difficulty with the present advance of scientific knowledge in providing for the welfare of the race. Nation Celebrates 250th Anniversary Swedenborg's Birth

AMAZING as it seems that one mind could encompass so many varied realms of knowledge, nevertheless it is true that Emanuel Swedenborg, the 250th anniversary of whose birth is being celebrated this year, made important contributions in many fields of science, theoretical and practical, in statesmanship, philosophy, and religion.

In 1716-1718 he published the first scientific periodical in Sweden, containing records of his mechanical inventions and mathematical discoveries, which included the first airplane design to have fixed wings and moving propeller, the first air-pump to employ mercury, and the description of a method for determining latitude and longitude at sea by observations of the moon among the stars. In the "Principia," a work on physics and cosmology, he arrived at the nebular hypothesis theory before Kant and Laplace. He was 150 years ahead of any other scientist in his works on the functions of the brain and spinal cord, and on the functions of the ductless glands.

Swedenborg served as an active member of the parliament of his country for more than fifty years, introducing fiscal reforms and much general legislation.

At the age of fifty-five Emanuel Swedenborg discontinued his scientific pursuits and began his work as a theologian, publishing the "Arcana Coelestia, Apocalypse Explained"; "Heaven and Hell"; "Four Doctrines"; "Divine Love and Wisdom"; "Divine Providence"; "Apocalypse Revealed"; "Conjugal Love"; "True Christian Religion"; and other miscellaneous theological works. Information regarding the life and achievements and the works referred to, will be sent without charge by application to the Swedenborg Foundation, 51 E. 42nd St., New York City.

When you don't feel well; when an ache or pain persists, go see your Doctor. He is trained and experienced to find out what is wrong and can prescribe a remedy. Bring your prescriptions to our Rexall Drug Store where they will be accurately compounded with fresh, high-quality ingredients at reasonable prices—the been ill, is able to be out again.

Funeral services for Mrs. Anthony Kososki were held Friday morning in the St. Peter and St.
Paul Catholic church in Spring library since the WPA removed the by a local organization. The Civic Club has been considering sponsoring the project.

Be Held SaturdaySoldier Field's ultra-modern ski meet, which has been rescheduled for Saturday, Feb. 12, becomes more "streamlined" than ever. High winds which forced the postponement of the annual Chicago Times classic last Sunday gave the sponsors another idea. Real "streamlining" will be introduced to eliminate all wind resistance and make this big city ski tournament the most scientific and weather-proofed in world history of the sport.The huge slide on the lakefront will be equipped with large butterfly wings at the take-off, funnel in shape and symmetrical in curves to deflect possible winds away from the skier's path as he rockets off the slide into space.Ernest Sandsteel, engineer of the slide whose innovations already have amazed ski builders from coast to coast, completed designs for the wind-breakers today and construction work was started immediately.Everything will be ready for the tournament take off at 2 p. m. Saturday, with every assurance that the contestants will make longer jumps due to the elimination of upsetting cross-winds.Sunday's postponement was caused by 40-mile an hour winds which whistled without warning down on Soldier Field scene two hours before the meet was scheduled to begin.
Even the weather man was caught off guard by the gale. Ski jumping is impossible in such high winds.But, now, even that ultimate of hazards will be whipped by the Times engineer. When the butterfly wings are added to the slide, its general appearance will resemble the drawings of architectural dreamers who vision how things will be when perfected by the builders of the year 2038.Church and

An American Point of View

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Washington, in response to popular insistence, seems recently to be lending a more attentive ear to the problems of the smaller employers and other average producers.

It has heard many protests, varied in nature. But prominent among them has been the demand for freedom to continue their labors without undue harassment and impractical interference from officialdom—however paternal in theory.

This demand may have amazed many politicians, but it didn't surprise the nation as a whole.

It was a typical American point of view, which office-holders who admire the European pattern seem to find difficult to understand. It was the point of view of our pioneer ancestors who carved America out of a wilderness, asking only the right to build their homes and their churches, to raise their families, and to perform their labors, without the intrusion of appointed bureaucrats and destructive tax burdens.

In America, the spirit of self-reliance expressed in that point of view still persists. It is our great national heritage. It should be preserved.

But it cannot be preserved by constant attacks on initiative and enterprise, by pointing to the doubtful economic experiments of a frightened Europe; by preachments that the politicians, rather than the people themselves, know best how to conduct the people's business.

It was the people, and not the politicians, who built America.

It is the people, and not the politicians, who know the work to be done, and are eager to continue it.

That is the principle on which our nation was founded, and on which it grew to greatness. It is the principle that Jefferson preached. It is the principle that the average man is trying to impress on Washington.

And when Washington listens to him, and returns sincerely to that fundamental principle, the gates which bar the pathway to recovery will be opened, and America can continue the progress which the strength, the energy and the intelligence of her people assure.

Now that February is here, the first signs of spring will soon be approaching. Mother nature shows a bit of wan green grass here and there. Pussywillows appear in the swamps and on nice warm sunny days, an occasional little bud peeps its head out. There's no doubt about it—winter is on the wane.

Most of us have that certain feeling inside us that warns us that spring is in the air or in other words, just around the corner.

We do not mean that feeling of joy and something new, but we mean that insidious, creeping languor that is known as spring fever. Instead of that active feeling we should have, we become lazy. A desire to yawn, sleep and loaf come over us. This is spring fever. There seems to be no cure for spring fever and there is nothing to do about it except to accept it as it comes and hope for a light case.

In a game between Brennan Gables Feathers and Tinley Park Feathers, the Brennan Feathers were nosed out of the Gables by a score of 10 to 8. Close guarding by both teams was the feature of the game and the ball was worked from one end of the floor to the other through out the whole game.

The next game of the evening was the Brennan Gables Lights and the Lemont Lights which was won by the Brennan Gables by a score of 22 to 11. The Brennan Gables boys got an early lead and were never in any danger. With their fast passing attack functioning and as ever their tight defense working they were in control of the play all during the game. For Brennan Gables, Cleveland was high scorer with 6 points. For Lemont, Brown was high with 5 points headed the team.

In one of the best played games of the season the Orland Park Heavies defeated the All Star Lemont team Monday night by a score of 37 to 35. This was the first defeat of the season for the Lemont team which has been playing some of the fastest basketball around here and winning over all opposition. The game was close all the way thru and was in doubt until the final whistle ended the game.

Hallinan was high scorer of the evening with 15 points scoring sensational shots from all over the floor. Steinhagen with 9 points following.

The defense of the Orland team was hard to penetrate and Lemont had few set ups the most of their scoring being from the side and long shots.

For Lemont, Reninger was high scorer with 11 points. F. Aberams second with 10 points and A. Aberams following with 9 points.

Homemakers' Exchange

of Helpful Household Hints and Recipes

Conducted by ELEANOR HOWE

When building a grate fire, lay one or two short ends of used-up candles among the kindling, or in the coal, and then ignite; in a short time the fire will be burning merrily.

If you have several partially emptied glasses of jelly left over, you may wonder, as do many other homemakers, just how to use up those last bits. If so, try this idea: store these left-over jellies in a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, where they will stay moist and fine flavored. Then, when you have a large enough supply, melt all together, pour into fresh glasses, and you will have a delightful new-flavored fresh mold of jelly.

Bake quick breads in your electric waffle iron. Time will be saved and you'll have a fancy-looking crisp, delicious bread. And you'll save fuel, besides.

The credit for the velvety smoothness and easy-to-makeness of this dessert must go to the modern ice cream freezer. APRICOT MILK SHERBET: (Serves 6). Wash 3/4 of a cup of dried apricots and soak 3 hours in 3/4 cup of water. Then cook the apricots over a low flame in this same water for about 20 minutes, or until soft. Remove from flame and beat with rotary egg beater to give the apricots the consistency of a puree. Add 1/2 cup of sugar, 1 tablespoon of lemon juice, and 2 cups of milk, beating again with rotary egg beater until smooth. Then fold in 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten. Pour mixture into freezing container of modern ice cream freezer. Then pack a mixture of 3 parts cracked ice to 1 part rock salt around freezing container. Freeze until turning becomes difficult—about 5 minutes. Take out dasher and pack down evenly with spoon. Cover ice cream with wax paper and replace cover. Pour excess water from ice and repack with more ice and salt. Then allow to harden at least 1 hour before serving.

To make crackers crumble easily, try the potato ricer method. To do this, fill the ricer with crisp, dry broken pieces and press. Then stir the broken pieces up a bit and press again. Result: the desired cracker crumbs; and with just a shake the ricer is clean.

Does your family like Hot Dogs? If so, here is an unusual way to serve them: When baking fresh yeast rolls, wrap strips of the dough around weiners, allowing the ends to stick out of their dough blanket. Give the dough time to double in bulk and bake as usual. If you have a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator store the yeast dough in it, and remove just long enough before baking to allow time for rising. Yeast doughs keep sweet, fresh, and properly moist when stored in the cold, circulating, moist air of these modern ice refrigerators.

To prevent pictures from slipping and hanging unevenly, first hang them on the wall, then turn over, thus crossing the wires. They will never slip.

He glanced into Joyce's boudoir and passed the open door of the drawing room. Then he retraced his steps and strolled to the opposite corner only to behold more emptiness. Abruptly he knew the truth as certainly as if he had watched Joyce lead Adan down the narrow passage toward a certain spiral stair. His heart contracted with such violence it caused him to halt in his tracks in more senses than one. Where was he headed? Where had he already arrived?

His deduction had been correct; Joyce had taken Adan to the roof. As they emerged into a transluence which would have been blinding had it not been dimmed by the impalpable golden dust of the night she turned toward her companion with caught breath. His face was amiable and alive but apparently his open eyes were blind. She felt dismay and then an impulse to laugh aloud at herself. She restrained it, aided by a feeling of sadness. The impassivity of his expression dumfounded her. Was it credible he saw neither moon nor stars nor that distant double torch of snow rising against the pale blue of heaven?

Rather hopelessly she led the way to the parapet and sat down, sensing a drag as if he followed unwillingly. Last night she had shivered and Dirk had put his coat around her shoulders; tonight it was Adan who quivered to the cold but she had no wrap to lend him. Since he was far more warmly dressed than she it seemed the cold which affected him must come from within himself. He was silent; not morose—just silent and suffering. If he saw the moon, the stars and the Nevada at all, it was with a calculating and compressing eye that strove to diminish grandeur to the size of a stage backdrop for future reference. He was theater, he was city, and he was Latin; furthermore such nights as this, with snow-capped Popo added to the Sleeping Woman for extra measure, were the everyday chili-con-carne of his existence. He made a movement toward his breast pocket. At least they could talk, thought Joyce; she must say something—must, must! She turned her head and felt her jaw drop loose. Adan was knotting his silk handkerchief at the back of his neck, arranging it in such a manner as to mask nose and mouth against the perils of the night air.

Joyce almost choked. "You don't like it here, do you?" she managed to murmur.

"Oh, yes, I do," replied Adan in muffled tones. "Much better than when Pepe ran the place."

Again Joyce caught her breath. "That's so," she said presently, "you visited him, didn't you?"

"Once."

"What was it? A shooting party?"

"Oh, no — a roughhouse. We brought down a carload of girls and two carloads of men. Don't let's talk about it." Abruptly his voice turned pleading. "Let's go down to the piano. I want to play for you—play for you like last night."

She rose with a sense of relief and escape to which were added several more poignant emotions—chagrin, self-pity, disappointment, to name only three, and a sort of confused dismay composed of anger at herself, and at the world in general and Dirk in particular. What had he to do with it? Nothing. That was why she was angry at him and somehow it seemed a perfectly good reason. As she hurried along the balcony, heading for the drawing room, she saw him leaning on the rail, his face lifted toward the visible patch of sky.

"Adan is going to play," she said crisply. "Want to come along?"

"No, thanks," said Dirk even more curtly. "I'm going to bed."

Under her urging Adan played only boisterous music — rollicking marches, rumbas and a galloping passo libre—and when he tried to slip into a languorous tango or a dreamy waltz she broke in with a cry: "No, no! something fast, faster—something jolly." She was studying him, measuring him by his own standard, yet giving him no chance to practice the whole alchemy of his art. He could have his piano but nothing more. Sitting there, with his agile fingers flying over the keys, he became readable, clear to her eyes. He was handsome, good-natured, shrewd, kind-hearted and fearless—an ideal master of ceremonies. Quite suddenly he rose from the piano and faced her, his eyes hard.

"You don't like me tonight," he stated.

"Why, yes, I do, Adan," stammered Joyce, "of course I do. What makes you say that?"

"No, no," said Adan, somewhat bewildered at finding himself in a role whose lines and cues he had totally forgotten if he had ever known them—the role of the undesired. He couldn't yet quite believe it. Much less could he conceive he might soon find himself cast as a pursuer if he didn't take his eyes off the flushed face before him. But some inkling of danger may have stirred his senses as he continued, "It's different tonight. You ask for silly, meaningless music — music with no soul. You don't come with me. You stand to one side to see how fast I can run up and down the piano without losing my breath. No; I won't play any more. I'm a man, not a whippet chasing an electric rabbit for you to laugh. Good-night, senorita. You are very beautiful, but this evening you happen not to be a woman."

CHAPTER XII

The bullet which passed through Dorado's leg and traversed the heart of his horse was steel-jacketed; had it been soft-nosed the wound would have been serious, possibly fatal. The heavy-set general suffered far more from the shock of his fall than by reason of the hole through his thigh, nevertheless he considered his condition grave enough to appeal to Blackadder for advice and aid. He released him from the batea and installed him as nurse—a change equivalent to a transfer from one galley bench to another since, needless to say, Pepe was in the vilest of tempers.

Blackadder had often been called upon to act as surgeon in far more desperate cases amid surroundings fully as primitive. He procured a couple of cotton jumpers, soft and ragged with wear, requisitioned a precious bar of soap and washed them out with his own hands. Then he boiled a kettle of water, tossed in a handful of salt and was ready. With a mighty grip he pressed the wound both ways from the inside out until the blood showed bright and clear of impurities. He took surly satisfaction in Dorado's howls of pain and a subsequent torrent of imprecations as the outlets were bathed with hot brine and then banded. Almost hourly thereafter the patient would insist on having the dressing removed. With plenty of salt water on hand Blackadder felt no fear of infection but resented such frequent interruption since he was busy with affairs of his own.

Keeping his ears and eyes wide open, a single day sufficed to give him an accurate idea of the layout of the camp; since nobody thought he knew Spanish all talked freely in his presence. It was situated at the northeastern extremity of the barranca where the chasm pinched out against sheer cliffs at whose feet burred the spring which supplied the brook with water. At night all the so-called miners—nothing but enslaved peons picked up at random —were herded into the depths of the two drifts opposite the one occupied by Dorado and himself. The riders then spread their petates in the airy entrances, forming a solid layer of bodies over which a fugitive would have to fly like a bat to escape. In addition two men with shotguns stood guard day and night at the right-angle turn downstream.

So much for the exterior; by night, when sleep seemed to have a fair hold on his patient, Blackadder would slip away for subterranean exploration. Darkness was his greatest handicap. Matches were scarce, candles there were none nor any lantern. Again inventiveness backed by experience—to say nothing of a knowledge of capillary attraction—came to his aid. Luxuriant castor oil shrubs grew in the shadow cast by the southern wall. He gathered a quantity of the berries, crushed out their oil into a discarded tomato can and rolled a strip off a bandage into a wick. Coiling it in the tin he let one end hang over the side, lighted it and found himself provided with a tiny but lasting beam of light.

By its aid he was able to explore the cavernous reaches behind Dorado's dwelling. There were three inner rooms besides his own. In one, sealed with a locked door of hewn timbers, he knew the daily washings of gold were stored. The other two were open to such air as was available and matted heaps of hay showed they had been used as habitations. What interested him most, however, was the shaft he had surmised must exist. He found it on his third excursion and to his delight discovered it was not vertical but ascended at a slant, showing whoever had sunk it had lacked a mechanical hoist. No doubt it was cluttered with debris, but where men had once passed a man could pass again. Here was a road to freedom, ready-made, but reflection forced him to admit it could lead only to recapture or starvation in the desert; without a horse waiting at the exit it was useless.

He reverted to the idea which had developed in a flash to the size of a full-grown oak—trade La Barranca for possession of Joyce. He had no illusions as to the cash value of the hacienda. Discovery of the bootleg gold diggings might have impressed a novice, but not an old-timer who happened to know Mexican law establishes the subsoil as the inalienable property of the state. Aware of the general situation as well, he was convinced tragic trouble and no conceivable gain would be Joyce's inevitable lot should he fail in his intention to rescue her, willing or unwilling. Dorado himself gave an opening.

"Buena, cabron, it is now the third day and you write no letter. Tomorrow I think perhaps I send one finger."

"Listen, Dorado," said Blackadder, "you and I have seen a lot of each other and we ought to be able to talk straight from the shoulder. You occupied La Barranca for several years. Wouldn't you like to lay your hands on it again?"

Dorado straightened too suddenly, groaned and settled back.

"Go on," he ordered. "You talk, I listen, then I tell you."

"You know who threw you out, don't you?"

"That Pancho Buenaventura," cried Dorado, turning purple, "and his butcher-boss, General Onelia."

"No, no," said Blackadder impatiently. "Didn't you see a girl? Don't you know anything about her?"

"Girl?" repeated Dorado, his eyes suddenly wide. "Yes, I see one girl. Very nice girl. Who is she?"

"The daughter of Cutler Sewell, the man from whom you stole the hacienda. He's dead and she owns it."

"Me, steal!" cried Dorado, enraged. "Pepe Dorado steal! No, no. That gringo, he abandon La Barranca."

"Just so," said Blackadder, "exactly the way you abandoned it five or six days ago, exactly the way the present tenant might be urged into abandoning it again. Get it, or do you want half an hour to think the thing out?"

"Si, si," murmured Dorado thoughtfully. "You tell me some more now."

"Here it is—the whole thing in a nutshell. I lied when I said I don't speak Spanish and again about being a prospector. I'm Miss Joyce Sewell's guardian acting for her stepmother. We don't want her to stay at La Barranca at any price. When you held me up you did yourself a bad turn because I was on my way to drag her out. If you want the place, help me do it now."

"How?"

"Give me a horse. Send guards to watch me all the way into the hacienda."

"Then what?"

"Sooner or later I'll snake the girl out and La Barranca will be once more abandoned and at your mercy. The only thing that stumps me is how to get away to Toluca and from there to Mexico City." He paused. "Of course, if you should try any double-crossing in the way of holding us both for ransom you'd lose the hacienda in the end and perhaps your life."

Dorado thought for a long time, his eyes half closed lest Blackadder read his mind. What fools these gringos were—they still believed in honor among thieves! He pictured first La Barranca, most desirable of all haciendas as far as he was concerned, then Joyce whom two flashes had revealed to be as lovely a girl as he had ever seen. At the moment he honestly believed he could be happy with either as long as he lived—but with both? Mere anticipation caused moisture to gather at the corners of his loose mouth.

"In exchange for freedom and the senorita," he announced finally, "you make offer of La Barranca. So?"

"That's it," said Blackadder.

"I accept. The matter of your escape to Mexico City is not difficult to arrange. Near the hacienda there is a rope bridge which saves many miles. I have a car in Toluca; I shall send for it and hide it by night in an arroyo. I'll have horses at the bridge when you arrive with the senorita and I myself will be there to wish you both goodspeed. It remains only to agree on a signal announcing you are ready."

"That's the trouble," said Blackadder, scowling. "How do I know just when I'll be ready since I may have to carry the girl out against her will?"

"So?" murmured Dorado curiously. "But let's not worry over such small difficulties. The moon is in its third quarter; before it rises there are two hours of darkness. When do you wish to start?"

"Today. Now."

"Buena. Tomorrow night, and the next, and the night after that, I shall spend the two hours immediately preceding the rising of the moon at the bridge—on the north side. Be careful how you cross it."

"I know all about rope bridges," said Blackadder. "What about your leg?"

"You are a good doctor. It is quite nearly well. Today I can walk. I will show you; I shall go now to choose your horse and give orders."

Blackadder took advantage of his absence to descend to the brook as though to wash his hands but in reality to recover his passport and wallet. Half an hour later, accompanied by three guards armed with carbines, he was riding downstream toward the switchback path which had caused him such agony a few days before. Since it was the only exit from the barranca through all its length they were obliged, once the level of the prairie was reached, to ride all the way back around the camp before starting down the other side. Before they made the turn, however, he noticed a peculiar depression masked by a patch of thorny acacias. Deliberately he passed to windward of it and caught a faint odor of smoke; so, he thought, had he risked the shaft here is where he would have come out.

But that was not to be his only discovery. An hour later, chancing to glance across the barranca, he saw a sight that first puzzled, then amazed him. Three lorries were wending their way over the plain from the general direction of Toluca. That in itself was not surprising; what astonished him was their freight—each was loaded with a howitzer. At first he had thought they were boilers; but no, there was no doubt about it, they were howitzers. He questioned the men but got only shrugs for his pains and a little farther on they came to a halt.

Word "On" Is Frequently Mispronounced; "Again" Next in Order for Carelessness

What common words do we Americans mispronounce? The office of education has helped to compile a list of the dozen words in common use that are most abused.

Strange as it may seem, the two-letter word "on" is the most frequently misused word on the list. You might think that almost anyone could pronounce this preposition correctly, but thousands say "un" or "en" and the word is just about number one in the battered American vocabulary, observes a Washington United Press correspondent.

Number two is "again." Folk in this country apparently like to pronounce it like something left over from the prosperity days before 1929, as "a-gain," or they may shorten it to "a-gen."

The rest of the list runs: toward, interesting, accept, address, preferable, drowned, perform, automobile, attacked and forehead.

For correct pronunciations, consult your dictionary. This is the court of last appeal in case you get into an argument. Remember that the first form given in the dictionary is the preferred one.

All these words are supposed to be in the vocabulary of a person who knows at least 2,000 words. This fact is based on numerous studies of the frequency with which words are used in speech, in newspapers, in magazines, in books and on the air waves.

Of course, other words may be mispronounced a higher percentage of times, but such words belong to the higher levels of personal vocabularies that include more than 2,000 words.

For example, here are a few sticklers for your tongue if you have a vocabulary running up to 5,000 words:

Literature, extraordinary, envelope, drama, detail, recess, route and subtle.

Stitches in Time

A STITCH in time goes a long way toward making your days brighter and your burdens lighter when the bustling, busy days of Spring roll 'round. No time then for leisure hours with your sewing kit, and fortunate indeed are the early birds who have got on with their Spring wardrobe. The moral?—make your selections now and be off to the races when the season starts!

Practical House Coat.

There is a versatility to this clever pattern which makes it a prime favorite for the style-conscious and the thrifty. Designed in two lengths, it lends itself perfectly to either of two needs—as an apron frock in gingham or seersucker for busy days around the house, or as a full length beach or sports coat in chintz or linen crash. Seven pieces to pattern.

Slimming Silhouette.

This handsome frock in linen or crepe does wonders for the full figure, sloughing off pounds here and bulges there with the utmost ease. Streamlined from the shoulders and buttoned at the waist with two graceful scallops, this is the sort of frock which answers your need perfectly for almost any social or shopping excursion, a standby to see you through the Summer. There is a choice of long or short sleeves and the simplicity of the design—just eight pieces in all—insures success even for the inexperienced in home sewing.

Attractive Apron.

"Swell" isn't a word the teacher recommends but it is highly appropriate in describing this handy apron frock which goes about the business of being an honest-to-goodness apron, not just a postage stamp model to wear for effect. Appealing in design, easy to wear, extremely serviceable, with two convenient pockets, this perfectly swell apron was designed by a busy housewife who knew her oats! Six pieces to the pattern.

Slow-Fast; Fast-Slow

When you see a slow-motion scene on the films, you probably think that it was taken very slowly with the camera, and that this is the reason it goes so slowly on the screen. Actually, it is taken much faster by the cameraman than is the case with ordinary pictures. At the moving picture theater it is run at exactly the same speed as is any of the other films.

By taking twice as many pictures in a second with the camera, the motion will appear one-half as fast on the screen. Likewise, if the cameraman takes the pictures at half speed, they appear twice as fast as normal when projected on the screen. The faster they are made, the slower they are when projected, and vice versa.

Are Women Better Shoppers than Men?

GRANTING a woman's reputation for wise buying, let's trace the methods by which she has earned it. Where does she find out about the advantages and details of electrical refrigeration? What tells her how to keep the whole household clean — rugs, floors, bathroom tiling — and have energy left over for golf and parties? How does she learn about new and delicious entrees and desserts that surprise and delight her family? Where does she discover those subtleties of dress and make-up that a man appreciates but never understands?

Why, she reads the advertisements. She is a consistent, thoughtful reader of advertisements, because she has found that she can believe them—and profit thereby. Overlooking the advertisements would be depriving herself of data continuously useful in her job of Purchasing Agent to the Family.

For that matter, watch a wise man buy a car or a suit or an insurance policy. Not a bad shopper himself! He reads advertisements, too!

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, © Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for February 13

CONSERVING THE SABBATH FOR MAN

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:23-3:6. GOLDEN TEXT—And He said unto them, The Sabbath was made for man—Mark 2:27. PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Holy Day. JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Holy Day. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Shall I Do on Sunday? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Using the Sabbath for the Whole Man.

"A man's soul is in a bad state when he begins to regard man-made rites and ceremonies as things of superior importance and exalts them above the preaching of the gospel. It is a symptom of spiritual disease. There is mischief within. It is too often the recourse of an uneasy conscience. . . . No wonder St. Paul said to the Galatians, 'Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed on you labor in vain.'" These are the comments of John Charles Ryle, Lord Bishop of Liverpool, on the lesson of today.

The formalists of Christ's day, the Pharisees, had overlooked the heart of God's law and the holy living which it was intended to produce, and had bound up even the observance of the Sabbath (which was intended to be a day of rest and gladness) in such a mass of technical "thou shalt not" that it was a day of fear. They had a false outward profession of worship and had entirely missed the true spirituality of God's law, a fact which drew upon their heads the anger and rebuke of our Lord.

While we as Christians do not observe the Jewish Sabbath, there are principles of doctrine and life bound up in this lesson concerning the Sabbath which we may with profit apply to our day of rest—the first day of the week—the resurrection day, often called "the Lord's Day."

I. False Spirituality Unmasked.

The two incidents in our lesson reveal that under the cloak of earnestly observing the law of the Sabbath the Pharisees were actually covering their own hypocrisy and their hatred for Christ.

The accusations against the disciples because they had taken and eaten grain was not on the ground that they had stolen, for the law (Deut. 23:25) guaranteed that right to the one who had passed through his neighbor's field. They contended, however, that the disciples had worked on the Sabbath in picking and hulling the grain.

The healing of the man with the withered arm revealed that back of their professed concern for the Sabbath was a real hatred for Christ. It is an appalling thing that in the house of worship on the very Sabbath day these men, outwardly so religious, were plotting against our Lord. "They watched him," and even so the enemies of the cross watch us who are his followers.

II. True Spirituality Defined.

Jesus cuts across human hypocrisy and hatred to declare that the true keeping of the Sabbath is to do the work of God. No work of necessity (like plucking the grain) or of mercy (like healing the withered arm) is ever out of place on the day of rest.

How shall we know what we may do on the Lord's Day? Two guiding principles appear in our lesson. (1) Know and follow God's Word. Note the use that Jesus made of it in verses 25 and 26. No man will misuse the Sabbath or the Lord's Day who understands God's Word and obeys it. (2) Live in accordance with the spirit of the Lord Jesus. When tradition stood in the way of the best interests of man, He broke with tradition. If He could do good on the Sabbath He did it.

A word of caution is needed, for some have sought to interpret this lesson as providing biblical ground for doing all sorts of things on their day of rest. That day is for man's good, not for his destruction. His greatest good is served by rest, worship, spiritual development, Christian fellowship, and the doing of deeds of necessity and mercy.

III. Righteous Indignation Manifested.

Our Lord rightly showed His holy anger (v. 5) against his hardhearted critics. He was the Holy One who did not permit His anger to go beyond its proper expression. Man, it must be confessed, seldom is able to control and direct even his righteous indignation. But there is such a thing as being angry without sin (Eph. 4:26), and one could sometimes wish that God's children could be moved to a holy anger against all sin and unrighteousness.

Comforting Word

This is a comforting word of Scripture which presents Christ as a shepherd whose sheep had strayed.

AROUND THE HOUSE

For Home Dressmaking.—Make a small pincushion and sew it to a "bracelet" of elastic. Stick some pins in the cushion, slip the bracelet on your left wrist and the pins are always handy.

Bacon in Stuffing.—Bacon, chopped small, should be added to all stuffing. It gives a delicious flavor.

Tasty Sandwiches.—To vary the plain peanut butter sandwich, mix peanut butter with chili sauce, spread on slices of hot buttered brown bread, and put together with crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with slices of dill pickle.

When Boiling Suet Pudding.—Put three or four slices of orange rind in the water. These will collect all the grease, and the pudding will be light.

Use for Old Shears.—Old shears are useful in salad making to shred the leaves of lettuce or other greens.

Cream Soup.—To prevent skin from forming on a cream or milk soup, beat it just before serving. The froth protects it from skin formation.

Remember Our Feathered Friends.—Birds welcome bread crumbs and suet when winter winds are howling, but don't forget to provide shelter for them so they may eat in comfort. Roosting boxes are easy to make and save the life of many a bird.

Haddock With Tomatoes.—Lay a small dried haddock in a pan with a little water and bake for ten minutes. Remove skin and bones, and flake the fish into large flakes. Melt two tablespoonsfuls butter in a saucepan, fry a little chopped onion lightly in it, add one-half cup canned tomatoes, and cook until soft. Put in the fish and a little chopped parsley, season, stir over low heat until all is thoroughly hot, then serve.

Wise and Otherwise
